Maschke Faces Embezzlement Charge

INDICTED

MAURICE MASCHKE

GRAND JURY ACTS IN QUIZ OF TREASURY

Former Cuyahoga County Officials and Council Member Accused.

HUGE DEFICIT REPORTED

Figures Juggled To Cover Up Thefts from County, Examiner Says.

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, July 29—Maurice Machke, for two decades Republican leader of Cleveland, today was indicted by the county grand jury in its investigation of a shortage of $570,380 in the county treasury.

Maschke was accused of embezzlement and larceny of $140,000 on Sept. 1, 1928—

The indictment charged Alex Bernstein, former chief deputy, with being the principal in the alleged embezzlement. Maschke, Henry A. Beckerman, a Republican leader, and H. A. Feismans, Beckermans partner, were charged with aiding and abetting Bernstein. The indictment also charged them with the embezzlement of the same money.

The indictments came only a few hours after Bernstein and Councilman Herman H. Finkle, Republican "whip" in the city council for 15 years, were accused in another indictment of embezzlement and larceny of $37,273.

A seventh man, Joseph L. Lange, discharged as a deputy treasurer a month ago, was indicted on charges of embezzlement and forgery of $2,097.

The reputed embezzlements occurred while former Treasurer Walter E. Cook was in office. L. G. Collister, present treasurer, has maintained the deficits occurred before his term and since were "covered up" without his knowledge.

State Examiner James N. Main, who reported the huge shortage in the treasury after months of investigation, asserted Bernstein manipulated books so as to conceal irregularities. This was done, Main said, by taking funds from tax collections to balance shortages in the previous collections.

Bernstein was a trusted employe of the treasurer's office at various periods during 15 years. For nine months, between the terms of Cook and Collister, he was acting treasurer.

Maschke, a national committeeman from 1924 to 1932 has long dominated Republican politics in Cleveland and was national committeeman from 1924 until this year. Finkle was regarded as his chief lieutenant in affairs of city government until recently when he relinquished the majority leadership in council.

The alleged embezzlements occurred prior to Nov. 14, 1928, the grand jury's report said. On that date, the money was restored to the treasury in a series of four checks issued by Finkle and deposited to the credit of the county treasury, it was charged.

On the same day, Examiner Main has said, seven cashier's checks totalling $140,000 were issued to Charles Bernstein, half-brother of Alex Bernstein, and deposited to the treasury's account.

Lange, a ward leader and a Republican candidate for congress in 1928, was alleged to have taken $2,097 from the tax payment of the M. and M. company, replacing it after the investigation into the treasury started.

NINE INJURED IN OHIO STORM

Wind Does Extensive Damage in Central and Southern Parts of State.

By The Associated Press

At least nine persons were hurt, one possibly fatally, and extensive property damage was done by a wind, hail and rain storm that struck central and southern Ohio last night.

The most seriously injured was Miss Missouri Huff, 42, who was almost completely scalped when a tree fell across her automobile at Ironton. Her son, Junior, 5, was in a serious condition from a concussion of the brain which induced convulsions. Miss Hazel Willis and Ann Huff, daughter of Mrs. Huff, also occupants of the Huff car, were seriously hurt.

Mrs. Russell Bowman of Decring, near Ironton, was cut and bruised when the roof of her home was blown off.

Ironton was in darkness for nearly two hours, and a Presbyterian church and an undertaking establishment were unroofed. Several store windows were blown out in Russell, Ky., across the Ohio river from Ironton. Observers said the wind reached a velocity of 90 miles an hour in Ironton.

David James, a Negro, was tossed by the wind through a window at Columbus, and suffered cuts on the head. Miss Betty Shaw and Miss Leona Sacks also were cut by flying glass.

Blown off a load of hay, Howard Rockey of Miamisburg sustained a broken arm and a fractured rib. Two other persons were cut by flying glass when the gale broke plate glass store windows in Cincinnati. Hail the size of marbles fell there.

Lightning struck a power station of the Cincinnati & Lake Erie interurban line, stopping service for two hours between Dayton and Cincinnati.

Drama Enacted As Army Routs Bonus Veterans

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, July 29—One of the most dramatic sidelights of the army's drive on the B. E. F., last night centered around Maj. George O. Patton, of the cavalry, who was compelled by duty to rout from Camp Marks a man who once saved his life on a battlefield in France some 14 years ago.

During the war, Major Patton held the rank of colonel in charge of light tanks. His aid was a youth from Camden, N. J., named Joe Angelo.

One night seven men, including Major Patton and Angelo, were out on a patrol when a shell struck nearby. The officer was badly wounded, but Angelo dragged him into a shell hole and stayed with him all night.

Angelo was one of those who

WALKER DENIES ALL CHARGES

Roosevelt Studies Gotham Mayor's Answer to Demands for Removal.

REPLY ASSAILS SEABURY

Investigator Falsifies Testimony, Jimmy Charges, Blaming Politics.

By The Associated Press

ALBANY, N. Y., July 29—James J. Walker's denial of official dishonesty or corruption as mayor of New York City was being studied today by Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt.

His reply to Samuel Seabury's complaint that he was unfit to remain in office, was submitted to the governor yesterday. In 27,000 words he set forth his reasons for contending that Seabury and others who sought his removal were wrong in believing that he had used his office for personal gain.

"Since the day of my birth," Walker assured Governor Roosevelt, I have lived my life in the open. Whatever short-comings I have are known to everyone—but disloyalty to my native city, official dishonesty or corruption, form no part of these short-comings."

Assails Seabury

Denying all accusations, he assailed the counsel to the Hofstadter legislative committee, informing Governor Roosevelt in one instance that "Mr. Seabury deliberately falsifies the meaning of the record." He also accused Seabury of withholding from Roosevelt part of the significant evidence gathered by the committee.

He said the investigation was "conceived, born and fostered in politics. The desperation growing out of the necessity to offset the failures of the present Republican organization, city, state and national, inspired it."

(The committee is composed of four Republicans and three Democrats with Seabury, a Democrat, as chief counsel.)

"Not one witness," he declared, "testified to any wrongful or illegal act of mine during the last six and one half years."

Roosevelt Silent

Governor Roosevelt had nothing to say about the Walker reply, which he requested more than a

DROWNS IN OHIO RIVER

PORTSMOUTH, O., July 29—

HOLLYWOOD ACTRESS VICTIM OF POISON

LINA BASQUETTE

Lina Basquette Blames Act on Love Affair with Dempsey.

By The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES, Calif., July 29—Lina Basquette, movie actress, was taken to police hospital early today in a critical condition from poisoning, police surgeons said. Responding to an anonymous telephone call, an ambulance driver and surgeon broke in the doors of her Hollywood apartment and found the actress writhing in agony on a divan.

Teddy Hayes, former trainer of Jack Dempsey, whose engagemnt to the actress after a reconciliation was announced late Thursday, was at the apartment, police reported.

A note addressed simply "to Jack" was found on a table nearby, and the police quoted it as reading "I love only you. I couldn't help it. I couldn't go on without you."

Miss Basquette recently had been on a vaudeville tour with Dempsey and a few days ago was injured in a fall into the orchestra pit of an Oakland theater during their act.

Some weeks ago, Hayes was quoted as accusing Dempsey of stealing Miss Basquette's affection from him (Hayes), but Hayes denied this, saying he and the actress were only good friends.

Police said Hayes told them he and Miss Basquette and her manager, Mart Baire, had been on a round of night clubs and the actress seemed extremely despondent when they took her home at 11:30 p. m.

On reaching his own home Hayes said he telephoned Miss Basquette and asked, "Are you all right?"

"Sure I'm all right," he said she replied. "I have just taken poison."

Hayes said he rushed to the house and found the actress in agony.

Detective lieutenants who investigated reported they found an empty poison bottle on the bathroom floor.

Miss Basquette tried to kill herself in August, 1930. At that time she was engaged in a legal battle with Harry W. Warner, brother of her former husband, Sam Warner, now dead, over the custody of their child.

ORNSTEIN FAILS TO ANSWER COURT CALL

$500 Bond Forfeited as Alleged Swindler in Hat Case Disappears.

A bond of $500 posted by S. L. Ornstein of Detroit, Mich., for his appearance in municipal court yesterday to answer a charge of obtaining money under false pretense, was declared forfeited by Municipal Judge W. R. Martin yesterday afternoon when Ornstein failed to appear. The bondsmen were notified today of the action of the court and were informed they have 20 days in which to either produce the prisoner or show reasons why the bond should not be collected.

A real estate bond of $1,000 to cover the bond of $500 fixed by the court was posted by William Kean and David Cohen of Columbus and was given on property owned by the two men in Columbus.

Ornstein was brought back to this city July 14 on an affidavit filed in municipal court by Mrs. Margaret Owens of 342 Silver street, charging he had obtained $350 from her by representing that she would be made manager of a hat store his company was planning to open here. Mrs. Owens charges he failed to keep the agreement.

The forfeiting of the bond, Police Prosecutor John Wiedemann said, this morning would not free Ornstein from arrest at any time his location might be discovered.

AHL OUT IN DURBIN CASE

Crawford County Jurist Steps Aside in Plans for Kenton Man's Trial

MOVE ENDS CONTROVERSY

Clears Way for Appointment of Another Judge To Hear Action.

Judge Clarence U. Ahl, common pleas judge of Crawford county, voluntarily, stepped aside to permit the appointment of another judge to preside at the trial Monday in Bucyrus of W. W. Durbin of Kenton on a charge of circulating unsigned election literature when a motion challenging Judge Ahl's right to hear the case came before Chief Justice Carrington T. Marshall in Columbus yesterday, attorneys reported this morning.

There was another development today in preparations for Durbin's trial Monday when Clarence J. Brown, secretary of state, was subpoenaed by the state as a witness according to an Associated Press story. Brown was instructed to take with him to Bucyrus an expense account filed by Durbin as treasurer of the Brooks Fletcher for congress committee of the Eighth district.

Judge Ahl stood aside immediately after an affidavit of prejudice and a motion filed yesterday by Durbin had been withdrawn at the suggestion of Judge Charles Close of Cleveland, formerly of Upper Sandusky, who accompanied Judge Ahl to the hearing, it was reported by Attorney Fred W. Warner, who represented Durbin.

Chief Justice Marshall today is expected to designate a judge to preside at Durbin's trial.

The affidavit of prejudice contained a list of statements supporting the contention of Durbin that the political interests between Judge Ahl and Charles F. Schaber, who brought the charge of circulating unsigned election literature against Durbin, might result in Judge Ahl's prejudice against Durbin in the trial.

J. D. Sears, Crawford county prosecutor, at the hearing yesterday declared that the charge against Durbin was not "purely political in nature" as charged by Durbin in the affidavit of prejudice. Judge Ahl declared that he was not prejudiced in the case, and said that he had refused to comply with the suggestion of Durbin's attorneys that he step aside from the bench because of the manner in which the suggestion had been made.

Present at the hearing were Chief Justice Marshall, Judge Ahl, Judge Close, Prosecutor Sears, Mr. Durbin and Fred W. Warner, counsel for Durbin.

Durbin is also scheduled to be tried Aug. 8 jointly with Carl Mulcahy of Lima, state prohibition agent, on charges of having attempted to bribe and blackmail public officials when he heard the case was to be investigated.

Hoover Issues Instructions for Thorough Inquiry into Yesterday's Bonus Army Outbreak with View to Possible Prosecutions.

ARMY MOVES TO DRIVE OUT STRAGGLERS

Majority of Veterans Leave Voluntarily and Order Seems To Be Restored, Although Authorities Are Ready for Emergency.

WASHINGTON, July 29—While band after band of the harassed bonus-demanding veterans headed away from the capital, army officials decided to make a final sweeping movement against the encampments here this afternoon to get every last straggler off government property.

No disorder was expected, the veterans almost entirely saying they were through with resistance.

President Hoover directed that the federal grand jury investigate the disorders of yesterday, with a view to prosecution where warranted.

The might of the United States army, summoned last night by the President, today at last had smashed the tight grip held on Washington for months past by thousands of bonus-demanding veterans.

Mute evidence of a struggle that has no identical parallel in American annals, four war-scarred areas mark the once-populous encampments of the bonus expeditionary force; one ex-soldier lay dead; scores were nursing injuries as a result of yesterday's conflict with police.

The troops, their major task done last evening and night, remained in command. The veterans, driven forth by tear gas and flaming torch applied to their crude shelters, clustered in small, questioning groups or headed from the city seeking to reorganize elsewhere.

Reports recurred of attempts to picket the White House, and the guard there was kept at double strength as the day waned, but officials expressed confidence there would be no repetition of what happened yesterday. Nevertheless, both the army detachments and reserves, as well as the police, kept on the alert for eventualities.

Statement Issued

While a more or less general exodus from the city appeared to be taking place among the veterans, their families and adherents, and with infantrymen standing guard over the four encampments which had been bathed in tear gas to force the occupants out yesterday and last night, the justice department issued this statement:

"In response to the President's direction to the attorney general to inquire into the recent disorders in the city the supreme court of the district has been requested to lay the subject forthwith before the grand jury now in session."

At Emergency hospital, Private George Scott—the policeman first injured in the clashes—remained in a serious condition from a fractured skull caused when hit by a brick.

On behalf of Walter W. Waters, the one-time commander of the "B. E. F.," it was said an attempt would be made to set up a national organization among the veterans. One of his aides headed toward Johnstown, Pa., with a view to setting up headquarters there. Also, a group of veterans who had spent the night in Virginia were allowed to reenter the city and escorted to the Maryland border line on their way, they said, to Johnstown.

Secretary Hurley and General Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff, had a conference before the secretary of war went to a cabinet meeting. Their position as to the functions of the war department in

SPEAKER OUTLINES GOOD WILL FORCES

Member of Peace Caravan on Program at Kiwanis Club Meeting.

The international postal system, the League of Nations and the World court were pointed out by Charles A. Engvall of Minneapolis, Minn., as forces in the bringing about of international peace and understanding in a talk before members of the Kiwanis club at its weekly luncheon meeting at the Hotel Marion yesterday noon.

Engvall, an undergraduate of Harvard university, is a member of a caravan of peace touring the state in the interest of world peace.

The Olympic games now in progress in Los Angeles, Calif., were also pointed out by the speaker as one of the forces in the promotion of universal peace.

In a plea for the League of Nations, Engvall pointed out that the league since its creation 13 years ago had made 16 decisions and given 16 advisory opinions on vital world problems which has resulted in preventing grave situations. He defended the apparent failure of the league to function in the recent invasion of China by Japan by stating that it was never held that the league was a perfect institution. In spite of its apparent failure, he declared, the efforts of the league had resulted in the credit and international commerce of Japan being reduced to the point where it was forced to withdraw at least from Shanghai.

He pointed out as another victory of the league the recent disturbance between Italy and Bulgaria. Italy's attempt to inforce certain conditions on Bulgaria ceased and apologies were made by Italy when, due to the action of the league, Italian credit dropped to a dangerous point.

GRANGE PLANS FOR SOCIAL AT SCHOOL

Plans were made for an ice cream social Wednesday night on the school lawn at the meeting of United Juvenile grange last night at the Claridon school building. A program followed the business session and opened with a song by the group.

Roll call responses were on the topic "What I Like to Do Best." Ruth Frayer entertained with a piano solo and Dorothy George contributed a recitation. A report on the work of the 4-H club was given by Mary Frayer and Jean Lawrence played a piano solo. The program closed with a season of jokes in which the club members took part. The next meeting will be in two weeks, when drill practice will be held.

SANDERS TAKEN TO PEN FOR LIFE TERM

Slayer of DeCliff Grocer Has No Hope of Obtaining Parole.

Charles Sanders, 29, colored, was taken to the Ohio penitentiary this morning by Deputy Sheriff Chester Cosgrove to begin a life sentence on a first degree murder charge for his part in the shooting of Green G. Miller, 73, DeCliff grocer, last New Year's day, during an attempted holdup.

Sanders' only hope of freedom is a governor's pardon, Prosecutor Russell M. Wilhelm said. Conviction on first degree murder charge makes Sanders ineligible for parole, he said. The jury's recommendation of mercy saved Sanders from the electric chair.

John Redding of Marion, who yesterday morning was fined $100 in municipal court and committed to the Columbus workhouse until the fine is paid, was taken to Columbus with Sanders. Redding pleaded guilty to a charge of driving while intoxicated after a deputy sheriff had arrested him Wednesday morning for driving his automobile across the lawn of the Children's home. Redding's driving rights were suspended for one year.

The great American drink of Hospitality

Bringing home the pause that refreshes
ENGLAND has its tea time. France and Germany their hour for coffee. The Swiss do it with a cup of chocolate. Ours, in the good old U. S. A., is the pause that refreshes with ice-cold Coca-Cola. In bottles it is so easy to keep it ready in the refrigerator at home. Just as a drink or with food, it has become the great drink of American hospitality.

Lots of Money

When said money was scarce? Not in Marion, it isn't. More money has come to light here since the competition for the oldest and oldest coin began than the United States has in three months. Everyone in Marion seems to have the coin-collecting yen, even if its only one old coin cherished as a pocketpiece.

Alfred Exton of 641 East Center street has a collection that includes American and British coins and an old Roman coin which he believes to be several thousands of years old.

The Roman coin is of copper, the edges worn away. The profile of a man, maybe that of Caesar, is on the face and on the back is a Latin script, illegible now. He has two copper British coins, one on which the date is worn away. The other bears the date 1736 and on the face, surrounding a man's profile is the legend, "Georgius II, Rex," which means in English, King George II. He also has a U. S. silver trade dollar, dated 1878. Trade dollars, according to collectors, are not rare, but to have one in a collection adds interest.

A trade dollar, dated 1874 and belonging to Delmas Jenkins of Bradford street, was received in a business transaction the other day from a Marion county resident. Trade dollars were first coined in 1873.

H. E. Earley of 461 Evans road who has been saving old coins over a period of years has a well preserved U. S. penny dated 1820 that is one of eight that have been in the family for 60 years. Thirteen stars surround the profile of a woman. He has several coins dated 1838, 1848 and 1844.

The Spanish crown and coat of arms decorate one side of a silver Spanish coin dated 1767 and owned by Dr. E. H. Raffensperger of South Prospect street.

The coin, about the size of an American half dollar, is a part of a collection which Dr. Raffensperger made several years ago. The coin is in good condition.

And so the coin competition goes on.

Slight Error

NEARLY everyone has had one of those "my most embarrassing moment" experiences and for a few minutes the other night one Marion girl wished the earth would open up and swallow her.

The young woman, rather a stickler for the "right thing" socially, went calling on her brother who lives in the East End. It was dusk and lamps were just being lighted in the homes.

Out of a car she hopped and up on the porch. Her gay "Yoo hoo," was answered by the information to come in because everyone was in the kitchen. In she dashed, and just inside the door the dash ended. The lamp was strange. Maybe her sister-in-law had purchased a new one since her last visit. The rooms were planned as always, but the furniture was different.

And then she woke up. She had romped into the home adjoining her brother's, and was facing a man to whom she had been introduced once by her brother, and had not talked to since. The two homes are built alike and both have awnings and in the dusk were almost identical.

Things were smoothed out when she found that her brother and sister-in-law were in the neighbor's kitchen but even at that, she hasn't quite recovered from the familiarity of her entrance into the home of a family she knew only slightly.

OHIO'S MATERNITY DEATHS LOWERED

Benefits of Improved Training in Obstetrics Reported by O. S. U. Official.

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., July 29 — Proper medical attention and improved training of medical students in obstetrics have helped reduce the maternity death rate in Ohio.

Within the last 10 years, the Ohio maternity death rate has been reduced from 13.3 per cent to 6.5 per cent, it was revealed in a report made public today by Dr. Andrew Rogers, chairman of the department of obstetrics in the college of medicine at Ohio State university.

In the university's clinic, in operation since 1916, the death rate has averaged only 2 per cent. Last year Dr. Rogers reported there were only 10 deaths in 1,031 deliveries in the clinic.

These figures, it was pointed out, compared favorably with the report for the United States at large. In 1925, the last year for which complete national statistics were available, the death rate was 13.7 per cent.

Staffed by senior students in the medical school, under supervision of members of the obstetrical department, the university clinic operates in conjunction with the university hospital and in cooperation with the District Nursing association of Columbus.

Patients visit the pre-natal clinic every three weeks in the first three months, twice a month in the next three months and then once a week.

CHAUTAUQUA PROGRAM ENDS

Name of Organization Changed as Concert Association Joins Forces.

Poem by Anne Campbell and music by the Filipino Collegians last night concluded Marion's five-day Chautauqua program.

Announcement was made last night that the Chautauqua in the future will be known as the Marion County Chautauqua Concert association. The names of directors for next year were read for approval. The name of the Chautauqua was changed when the Marion County Concert association joined forces with the Chautauqua board.

The board did not hold its customary organization meeting following the final program. It was announced that a board meeting would be called within a few days in which officers will be elected, and plans for next year's program will be completed.

Anne Campbell, whose schedule calls for one poem a day for newspaper publication, has touched the commonplace household happenings with poetry, samples of her work she gave last night show. She told of writing her first poem for newspaper while raising a family of three children and looking after her household work. For several years her daily poems have been published in a number of papers.

All of her writings find their inspiration in the home, and most of them are written from the viewpoint of the woman or child.

The Filipino Collegians gave a concert of their native music, popular numbers and classical selections. The five collegians played stringed instruments with the exception of a specialty number on a saw. They also provided the entertainment at the afternoon program.

The Maddest, Merriest Money? Plenty of It Three Churches Struck Earth's Gold Supply

BY ARTHUR BRISBANE

YESTERDAY in Wall street was "of all the glad new year, mother, the maddest, merriest day." Stocks were bounding up like the wild chamois looking for a high peak. The poor, starving brokers sold nearly 3,200,000 shares of stock, and plus signs were as numerous as wrinkles on the bear's forehead.

Will it last? Why drag that in?

WASHINGTON wanted to sell $650,000,000 long term Treasury notes, some paying 2½, some 3½ per cent. One issue was subscribed for twelve times. The government could have had $5,506,000,000 instead of $650,000,000, almost ten times what it needed.

This shows that there is money in the country. Our banks, more heavily loaded with cash than ever before, don't know where to use their surplus money.

But that doesn't mean anything for prosperity. There is much water in the Great Lakes. But if it stayed there it would do no good. The sun raises part of it, scatters it in rain. That helps crops.

The rest of it goes over Niagara Falls and produces power. That helps public ownership in Canada and private ownership on the American side.

If the water stayed in the lakes, refusing to be lifted by the sun's rays for rain and refusing to go over Niagara Falls for power, it wouldn't be useful.

That's the condition of our vast cash resources now, when money does not circulate.

NATURE'S LAWS work inexorably, no favoritism shown in these days of few miracles. On Wednesday lightning damaged three churches in New York, including a fine church on Riverside drive built with the assistance of John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

A big block of limestone, dislodged, carried an interesting gargoyle down with it.

Religious people once believed that lightning, threatening comets, eclipses of the sun and moon, tornadoes, plagues were always ordered by the Lord to do some definite thing. But when fire destroyed San Francisco, wiping out many churches, it was observed that Houghteling's great whisky distillery stood uninjured. And in a western town, where the public hall stood next door but one to a saloon, with a church between them, Ingersoll spoke in the hall the day after the church had burned down, struck by lightning.

Ingersoll made humorous use of that in an agnostic lecture, saying, "Somebody seems to be a bad shot." The intelligent man, in such an incident, sees and respects the fact that laws made by eternal power are themselves eternal, unchanging.

UNITED STATES geological survey sees no prospect of any more big gold finds in the United States. "The earth has been thoroughly searched for gold." Russia and Canada may possibly hold immense new deposits. However, gold, because of its high specific gravity, tends to sink deeper and deeper into the earth, and resists the action of water that would bring it down from mountain tops, directing men toward the mother lode. The amount of gold hitherto developed is probably as nothing compared with earth's real supply. If science could find a way to recover all the gold floating around in the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, gold would be cheaper than silver, and when some future Rockefeller invests the necessary thirty or forty million dollars to dig a hole toward the earth's center, tapping the inexhaustible heat and power, that enterprise may bring fresh knowledge about gold deposits.

UNCLE SAM should send kind regards to Sir Atul Chatterjee, who leads India's delegation in the Ottawa conference. Sir Atul says he and the rest of India won't "buy everything inside the British Empire" and buy nothing from the United States. India buys and sells in the outside world now $1,500,000,000 warth of products, 70 per cent outside the British Empire, and doesn't intend to jeopardize her trade with the United States.

Ohio Looms as Major Campaign Battlefield

Roosevelt Scheduled for Address and Hoover May Come Later; Developments in Last Week Center in East.

BY BYRON PRICE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON, July 29 — The East, so often the determining factor in past campaigns, has been the focus of political developments by far the most interesting of the current week.

Insofar as their significance can now be foreseen, these developments reject the likelihood of a Democratic appeal made to order for the traditionally dry South and the traditionally liberal West, which Governor Roosevelt was supposed to suggest in his pre-convention conferences. They indicate that the Democratic nominee will make a real effort for support among the wets and conservatives of the eastern seaboard.

Wet Plank Leading Topic

One of the things most talked about in the conferences held in Washington by James A. Farley, the Democratic chairman, was the prohibition repeal plank adopted at Chicago. He tried the sentiment of southern senators, and apparently was satisfied that emphasis could be put on the issue without endangering the South.

With Governor Ely of Massachusetts, Governor Roosevelt discussed ways and means of bringing the industrial Bay state into the Democratic victory, and probably will be officially disclosed when the nominee makes his radio address tomorrow night, and the Massachusetts governor issues his statement the following day.

The full scope of the Democratic strategy on prihibition, however, will not be known until after President Hoover's acceptance speech Aug. 11. If he goes moderately wet, it may accelerate the Democratic movement toward a still more complete repudiation of prohibition.

Pomerene Center of Interest

While the Democrats make most of the political news, Mr. Hoover and his managers prefer silence until after the acceptance. A buzz of political discussion followed the President's appointment of Atlee Pomerene of Ohio to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, but the White House took no part in it.

How much the Pomerene appointment will help the Republicans in Ohio is a matter of dispute. The former senator several times has been talked of as a favorite son of the Ohio Democracy for President, but recently he has not been active politically.

Ohio will have a large place in the political sun before the campaign is over. Governor Roosevelt, making his first speaking trip since the convention, will address Ohio Deomcrats at Columbus on Aug. 20. Probably President Hoover will go into the state later. This is one spot which was sure to become a battlefield whether the east did or not.

Newspaper editorial comment on the Washington bonus army evacuation, included:

New York Times—"* * * Now that the latent spirit of insolvent lawlessness has manifested itself in overt acts, the country should demand that the whole affair be thoroughly cleaned up, the veterans dispersed as speedily as may be and Americans no longer called upon to witness an insubordinate body of men asserting at the national capital that they are above the people as a whole and more powerful than the government itself."

New York Herald-Tribune—"* * * Whether these men are really communists or not is immaterial; they are agitators, and their object is to foment trouble and make headlines. Their assault upon the police—who bore the attack with courage and restraint—was bitterly unjustified."

New York Daily News—"* * * The government can not surrender to these men. But neither can it afford to go one inch beyond the absolute minimum of violence that may be necessary to keep them on their side of the line."

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "The obvious duty of the authorities at Washington is to maintain order at whatever cost. The capital can not surrender to the B. E. F. or to any other group insisting on rights that do not exist."

Washington Post: "President Hoover was fully justified in calling out the troops to put down this uprising against the United States. * * * No government can tolerate defiance and disorder on the part of its citizens. Individuals who violate the law and resist enforcement officers put themselves in a class of outlaws and must be treated as such."

Boston Evening Globe—"Whatever may develop as to the cause of the rioting, the record of the authorities, who have cooperated with responsible leaders of the marchers, had up to this point been a model of patience and forbearance. Come what may, the national government must maintain its authority over its own property in its own capital."

Boston Herald—"Cavalry at the White House and tanks and machine guns in the streets of Washington are not pleasant spectacles but it was evident that the riffraff mob would not understand arguments any milder. . . . The only criticism, if there is any, that lies against the President is that he did not act sooner."

Baltimore Evening Sun—"Panic, especially panic in high places, is usually contagious. It may be that after the demonstration of yesterday cooler heads will prevail, but it is all too likely that the disease will spread its virulence. In that event, as in yesterday's instance, reason will depart; passion will masquerade as intelligence and vehemence as conviction."

Birmingham Age-Herald — The bloody collision between veterans and police in Washington is surprising only because it has been so long delayed. . . . There was never any excuse for this attempt to frighten congress into granting the bonus of the sheer massing of petitioners."

Philadelphia Inquirer: "* * * The disorders of yesterday are serious, and the government has acted properly in taking them in hand at once * * *. It would be futile to place the whole blame on this straggling army of homeless and hungry men. The agitators who have misled them, the politicians who have yielded to impossible demands for fear of the consequences to themselves—These are much more to blame."

Philadelphia Evening Public Ledger—"It is probable that this clash was plotted from the beginning, and the real veterans honestly seeking help from the government are made the victims of the consequences of the radical propaganda. The President and his secretary of war deserve high praise for the promptness and efficiency with which they met the situation."

Cleveland News: There is no doubt that many of those who "dug in" at the capital were communists and professional agitators, bent on mischief. Toward such the government could show no lenience. Government authority can not be surrendered to any group, however distinguished the services of some of its individual members may have been.

Cincinnati Times-Star—Everybody except a few radicals and communists will regret the clash between Washington police and federal troops on one side and the remnants of the "bonus army" on the other. * * * It is the obvious thing to say, and it is largely true, that radical agitators, who are always on the lookout for trouble which can be widely advertised, were responsible for Thursday's violence. But what about the congressmen who, for reasons of personal profit, started the marchers on the futile and dangerous journey?

Kansas City Star: "Of course, the constituted authorities could not permit the marchers to defy the law, * * * the politicians and others who encouraged the marchers have an added responsibility in view of the happenings in the national capital."

San Francisco Chronicle: "Riot is riot; who ever does it and in whatever the cause. And order must be order, if civilized life is to continue."

Louisville, (Ky.) Times: "Grover Cleveland would have employed troops in a similar situation, and it would be disturbing to believe

GARBAGE COLLECTOR GIVEN FINE OF $50

Paul Bernard Pleads Guilty to Charge of Violating City Ordinance.

Paul Bernard, 45, of west of the city, was the first victim of the recent ordinance passed by city council prohibiting the collection of garbage by any but the city workers, when he was fined $50 and costs by Municipal Judge W. R. Martin yesterday afternoon when he pleaded guilty to violating the ordinance.

When arrested yesterday morning, Bernard was driving a light truck loaded with garbage he is said to have collected from grocery stores and fruit markets.

In an effort to put the city garbage collection department at least on a self-sustaining basis, city council several weeks ago passed an ordinance making it a misdemeanor to collect garbage in the city. Reports of night collections being made have reached the department on several occasions, it was reported at the garbage collection office. Yesterday when Bernard was found with the truck load of garbage he was placed under arrest. Other arrests will follow, Service Director E. O. Uncapher said today, as rapidly as the collectors are caught.

WALKER DENIES ALL DISHONESTY CHARGES

month ago. He may remove Walker or exonerate him.

Receipt of the Walker reply meant a major obstacle which had been delaying the Roosevelt presidential campaign was about to be cleared. Walker's removal, as the Roosevelt campaign masters see it, would be a costly affront to the strong Tammany organization. Exoneration of Walker, the managers fear, might be interpreted in the west and south as yielding to Tammany.

Walker informed the governor that "with all the power of the state of New York behind the investigation" Searbury was "unable to find or to charge that I had caused the wrongful expenditure or loss of a single dollar to the people of New York City out of upwards of $5,000,000,000 expended during my whole administration."

Voices Sherwood Denial

He denied Russel T. Sherwood, missing accountant, was his agent. Of Seabury's claim that Sherwood had deposited $1,000,000 which Walker failed to explain, the mayor said: "These accounts were not my accounts and I had no beneficial interest in these accounts. I did not have any knowledge of these accounts. . . ."

Of his relations with Paul Block, publisher, with whom he operated a joint brokerage account, Walker said, "evidently counsel to the committee cannot understand friendship without an ulterior motive.

"Mr. Block, who has been my intimate personal friend for many years, is a man of great wealth. . . . He has no need of anything which I as mayor could give him."

Walker denied he had "sponsored legislation to limit the number of taxicabs," and that J. Allan Smith of the Equitable Coach company, holders of a city franchise, had put up the money for a letter of credit on which Mr. and Mrs. Walker traveled to Europe. Walker said he put up $3,000 as his share in the $10,000 letter of credit used jointly by his party. The $3,000, he said, covered all the Walker expenses.

Walker's answer was a response also to the petition of William J. Schieffelin, who cited the Seabury contentions and urged Walker's removal "on behalf of the New York Committee of One Thousand." The mayor declared this committee was organized for political purposes.

HELD TO GRAND JURY ON ASSAULT CHARGE

Hershell Davis Bound Over Under $5,000 Bond After Hearing.

Hershell Davis, 20, of 333 Nye street, who pleaded not guilty Wednesday to a charge of criminal assault on a 17-year-old girl, was held to the grand jury by Municipal Judge W. R. Martin this morning under $5,000 bond after a preliminary hearing.

The girl and her physician were the only witnesses called by Police Prosecutor John Wiedemann. No witnesses were called by Davis. Heavy bruises on her neck and face and the side of her head were said by the girl to have resulted from a beating Davis gave her in the assault.

The girl testified she had taken a walk with Davis Tuesday night and when near the railroad crossing on Uncapher avenue, he forced her to accompany him down the track where he beat her about the face and attempted to choke her. In default of the bond, Davis was taken to the county jail.

FINANCE CORP. ACTS TO SPEED PROGRAM

Reorganization Completed as New Yorker Gets Director's Post on Board.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, July 29—Its reorganization completed with the selection of Charles A. Miller of Utica, New York, as the last director, the $3,800,000,000 Reconstruction Finance corporation plunged ahead today with its relief program.

Announcement of new loans, pending completion of the directorate, was believed imminent.

Miller, a Republican banker and lawyer who has been regional chairman for the Reconstruction corporation in the second federal reserve district, including New York, will be elected president of the relief agency. An Ohio Democrat, Atlee Pomerene, is scheduled to be chairman.

The announcement of Miller's appointment was made after all directors of the corporation but Jesse H. Jones of Houston, had conferred with Mr. Hoover. They said nothing about Pomerene's election as chairman except that it had not yet taken place.

controlling the activities of the bonus veterans in Washington was that the army is at the disposition of the District of Columbia commissioners for restoring order on federal property, and will not undertake any movements without request from the commissioners.

"Camp Sims" Evacuated

Meanwhile, in nearby Maryland a mile from the Anacostia camp, a number of veterans voluntarily evacuated "Camp Sims" after a visit from a National Guard officer of Maryland.

Camp Sims was a small group of tents in which most of the sick and disabled from the bonus army were cared for.

There were no signs of disorder today. But soldiers and police were held in readiness—especially in the vicinity of the White House.

Two blocks south of the quarters they formerly occupied on Pennsylvania avenue and where the heaviest fighting took place yesterday a large number of veterans were encamped on a lot under the command of J. W. Williford.

"We are starting now in groups of 100 men for Johnstown," he said. "This is private property we are on now and it will probably take until tomorrow night to move all the men out."

Field kitchens were serving the men at noon and a short time later the first batch marched out. Many of these veterans who were in the major trouble zone yesterday bore bruises and black eyes.

From outside sources, a Communistic sheet was being distributed to these veterans. They told in headlines the story of yesterday's troop movement, featuring the killing of one veteran by police.

Veterans who had brought their families here were at a loss to know where to live after the eviction. Men, women and children sat on trunks or boxes along the curb until helpful comrades offered lifts out of town.

At Emergency hospital, Private George Scott, the policeman who suffered a fractured skull in the first outbreak of violence yesterday, was reported improving. Whether he will live is yet a question, however.

Two hundred marchers who spent the night in nearby Virginia were escorted by state authorities to the District of Columbia line today but Washington officials at first would not permit them to reenter the city.

Upon this refusal, they attempted to return to Virginia but were balked in this move by officials. They lined up alongside a bridge awaiting a determination of their status. Later it was decided to let these veterans pass through the city with a small police escort, which took the contingent of 200 over from the 100 Virginia state police who had accompanied them to the state line.

Marching behind two American flags the group crossed into the District of Columbia by the bridge named after Francis Scott Key, composer of the Star Spangled Banner. They headed out Wisconsin avenue which leads to highways going north through Maryland to Pennsylvania. Their objective was Johnstown, Pa., where the mayor has said they would be welcomed.

The men carried their belongings, mostly swung over their backs, and almost everyone had a can of baked beans in his pocket.

They seemed in good spirits and readily went where directed. The group was composed chiefly of Californians, Texans and Missourians.

At the Anacostia branch of the Washington postoffice more than 150 men lined up leaving forwarding addresses.

Clerks said that most apparently were going to their homes.

General Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff, made a tour of inspection of the affected zones and found everything quiet.

Between 600 and 700 cavalrymen and infantrymen were on the patrol duty.

At the White House, it was said a number of telegrams had arrived overnight from radical organizations which threatened the government, as a result of the forcible evacuations of yesterday.

This assertion was made in an official source but was not amplified.

Both last night and today President Hoover kept close touch on the activities of federal troops.

Last Night's Events

The use of troops—cavalry, infantry, tanks and machine gun corps—was ordered by the President after a police demand for immediate evacuation of federal property had precipitated a riot. In it bricks and slabs of concrete flew, and finally shots were fired by police as they found themselves almost overpowered by the angry mob. One man, William Hushka, 37, Chicago veteran, was killed.

Speedy Action Taken

The District of Columbia authorities, certain that more bloodshed would be the only result if the police pressed at their task, turned to the White House. The President summoned cabinet aides and an order went forth bringing in from Fort Myer, Virginia, nearby, 300 cavalrymen, and a battalion of 350 infantry. They assembled near the White House and then marched down Pennsylvania avenue to the first of the bonus camps, almost in the shadow of the capitol.

After a pause to give the hundreds of veterans there a chance to move out peaceably, the khaki line, steel-[illegible] in full battle equipment with drawn sabers pressed the charge, and the job was quickly done despite resistance.

Without respite, the attacking troops moved on and cleared two other camps in the city and then swooped down on the largest of all at Anacostia, six miles from downtown Washington.

The withering combination of fire and tear gas left the veterans leaderless, demoralized and without shelter. They spent the night in open fields, parks and wherever they could find a haven. Many started for home.

Commander Absent

Walter W. Waters of Portland, Oregon, commander-in-chief of the bonus expeditionary force, was not at the Anacostia camp when it was emptied and consumed by flames. There were reports that he had left, telling some of his followers to meet him at Johnstown, Pennsylvania.

Earlier, he issued a statement saying, "No matter what may happen from now on the B. E. F. will carry on. We have gone too far to quit."

The operations of the military began in mid-afternoon and were climaxed when the last veteran was driven behind bayonets from the Anacostia camp beneath a starless midnight sky.

The torch was applied to three of the encampments, and fire razed the shanties and huts in which the veterans had been living. Witnesses disagreed as to whether the military or the veterans started the fire at Anacostia. In the others the soldiers did the work.

The action of the Chief Executive was strongly supported today by General Douglas MacArthur, army chief of staff, who had led the march on Anacostia.

MacArthur issued a statement to the effect that the Chief Executive "would have been derelict in his duty if he had not acted."

Before troops were called, there were frequent clashes between veterans and police. In one, Policeman George Scott suffered a fractured skull. His condition was serious, but physicians gave him a good chance to recover.

In one of the earlier melees, terminated by the use of officers' nightsticks, Pelham D. Glassford, superintendent of police, was struck with a brick and slightly hurt. His badge was torn from his coat by a veteran.

Clash Brings Death

The disorder flared up again, more seriously, in a brief encounter in which Huska was shot to death and another former service man, Eric Carlson of Oakland, Cal., seriously wounded.

Police who attempted to clear out the occupants of a partly demolished four-story brick building were rushed by hundreds of men. First they tried to stem the attack with night sticks and then began to shoot. At the fire, the attackers fell back.

The first shot was fired by George Shinault, an officer, who reported to Glassford he had acted in self defense. The police superintendent held he had been "justified."

Then came the troops.

In announcing his reasons for calling them, President Hoover mentioned that an examination of a large number of names of the bonus army had disclosed a considerable part of them are not veterans and "many are Communists and persons with criminal records."

Word that soldiers had been summoned spread and the streets were lined with onlookers.

As the troops moved to the first camp, Glassford shouted to the veterans: "Those who don't want to fight move across the street."

A large number did but most remained to face the consequences.

As the cavalry passed the main concentration of veterans the troops drew their sabers and noncommissioned officers held pistols pointed upward.

The troopers then wheeled about, clearing the streets of veterans and onlookers. Simultaneously the infantrymen, with rifles on guard and bayonets fixed, rushed up.

Some Refuse To Move

They drove the men across the litter-strewn block half full of shanty dwellings. Other groups, out of the line of charge, did not budge.

The soldiers donned gas masks in a half hush. Gas bombs shot forward and the khaki line rushed. A blue haze of gas enveloped them and the veterans scurried to safety.

Police and thousands of spectators who had thronged to the scene began weeping from effects of the tear gas. Stores along the avenue slammed shut doors and transoms to escape it.

As the veterans cleared out, the torch was applied by soldiers. Devouring flames speedily razed the shacks and tents which had given shelter to the bonus-seekers.

The troops then moved to another encampment nearby, where resistance was met. As the tear gas bombs hit the ground veterans snatched them up and shot them back at the infantry. The cavalry then rode pell-mell into the bonus army ranks. Several were injured by hoofs and saber slaps as they sought to unhorse the troopers, but they were driven off in no time. The troops then marched to the third camp and ousted the radical wing of the veterans' army headed by John Pace of Detroit. After pausing for an open-air dinner, the troopers were ordered to move forward to the Anacostia encampment.

Word of their coming had gone ahead. An assembly of the veterans was called and told by Edward Atwell, a divisional commander of the Anacostia group, that if an attempt were made to "stampede our women and children" the bonus seekers [illegible] tion of women and children began.

Tear Gas Attack Launched

The troops arrived, led by General MacArthur, at 12:00 p. m. As they crossed the bridge to Anacostia, the infantry began hurling tear bombs to dislodge a huge sightseeing crowd that impeded progress. Women and children ran screaming. As the calvary moved into the camp with infantry behind, a number of the huts housing the veterans were seen to burst into flames. Soldiers said the veterans fired them. The veterans placed the blame on the military.

Action was delayed, however, by the arrival of a courier from Atwell.

He asked that the advance be postponed 15 minutes to permit the remaining women and children to leave. Brigadier General Miles, in active command, promised 30 minutes, meanwhile deploying the cavalry in a semi-circle around the camp. During the wait, General Miles told newspapermen he had received orders "from above" to defer action until today but within minutes this decision was changed. The infantry advanced with fixed bayonets, between the burning shanties. The veterans retreated with no attempt at resistance.

Many camped on private property; others departed toward Washington, and a number prepared to leave for their homes.

Those who expected to spend the night in the capital were disappointed, for the bridge was barred by a solid line of soldiers. Glassford, the police head, said he had issued orders to keep the men out of Washington for the time being.

Four hundred veterans moved for the night into Arlington county, Va., across the Potomac river from Washington, but Sheriff Howard Fields promptly announced he would ask Governor Pollard for troops "if any of them stay more than 24 hours."

A group of veterans also departed for Johnstown, Pa., presumably to join Waters and accept the promised welcome of that city's mayor if they wished to establish headquarters there.

Calling out the troops did not constitute martial law. It was explained this was avoided by President Hoover's instructions to turn over all prisoners to civil authorities, and for the troops to act under orders from the responsible city heads.

The attacks on police were attributed by the White House and by Waters himself to the radical wing of the veterans army. The White House said the secret service had received this information.

Leaders Comment on Vet Disorders

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, July 29—Some excerpts from statements about the war-time methods used to convince veterans they should leave federal property and the capital:

President Hoover, in announcing he has asked the army to help —"in order to put an end to this riotting and defiance of civil authority. I have asked the army to assist the district authorities to restore order. Congress made provision for the return home of the so-called bonus marchers. Considerable part of those remaining are not veterans; many are Communists and persons with criminal records. The veterans amongst these numbers are no doubt unaware of the character of their companions and are being led into violence which no government can tolerate."

General Douglas MacArthur, chief of army staff—

"The President would have been derelict in his duty if he had not acted. He had gone the limit in the exercise of patience before he used force. It was a bad looking mob which he faced on Pennsylvania avenue and it was animated by the essence of revolution. It had come to the conclusion because of kind treatment that it was about to take over direct control by indirect methods."

Walter W. Waters, commander in chief of the B. E. F.—

"The men got out of control. There was nothing and is nothing I can do to control them. What happened is weighing very heavily on me. Every drop of blood shed or that may be shed in days to come as the result of these events can be laid directly on the threshold of the White House."

Pelham D. Glassford, superintendent of police—

"I handled the situation for nearly two months without bloodshed, but subsequent orders, I am sorry to say, resulted in the death of one man. The veterans, their organization broken up, now will be on the hands of police but not restrained by their leaders."

Cleveland Guards Against Disorders

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, July 29 — Special details of police were assigned to guard all public buildings here today in the possibility of trouble-some local reactions to the fighting between unemployed veterans and the soldiers and police in Washington.

Deputy Police Inspector Charles O. Nevel also ordered patrolmen to keep a close watch on hardware and any other stores where firearms might be obtained.

Nevel recalled that Cleveland has had several unemployment disturbances in the last three years.

3 BROTHERS SLAIN IN PITTSBURGH WAR

Alcohol Ring Killing Most Sensational in City's Crime History.

By The Associated Press

PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 29—Three Volpe brothers—John, Johnnie and Arthur—long political powers in the borough of Wilmerding, were shot and killed in a gun battle here today.

The shooting, one of the most sensational in Pittsburgh's criminal history, occurred in a coffee shop in what is known as the "Hill district" not far from the center of the city.

Dapper Johnnie Volpe, shot near the heart, staggered from the coffee shop and fell dead in the gutter.

His two brothers hardly moved from their tracks. They were dead when police reached the scene.

About a year ago, the Volpes, who have been implicated in liquor racketing in Wilmerding, sought to extend their activities to Pittsburgh. The district in which they were "put on the spot" is in the heart of the territory they invaded.

Crouched behind a counter of the coffee shop police found Sam Zaza. He babbled over and over again:

"I don't wanna be killed! I don't wanna to be killed!"

Police arrested him.

It was reported that five men walked into the restaurant and, without a word began shooting point blank at the Volpes.

coming convention at Portland, Ore., will commit itself on the bonus question. Already we have several petitions for and against immediate payment of the bonus."

Numerous Alarms Keep Police Busy

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, July 29—A report to the police at 12:15, that several hundred bonus seeks were banded together in the southeast section for a march toward the capitol and possibly the White House resulted in a squad of police being rushed to meet them.

Police alarms were sounded now and again, as reports reached headquarters of veterans concentrating, but none turned up any trouble. One was to the effect that several hundred were headed for the White House, and the already heavy guard there was reenforced while other officers hurried to meet the marchers.

A few minutes later, however, it was concluded that the group merely was enroute to Johnstown and a police guard was directed to escort it around the White House.

WASHINGTON, July 29—President Hoover, in a letter to the District of Columbia commissioners concerning the riot here yesterday, charged them "to at once find the instigators of this attack on the police and bring them to justice."

Theory of Navigation.

German fathers and mothers who are thinking of sending their sons to sea as naval cadets will be investigating the possibilities of safer land occupations. The admiralty will have to do considerable explaining to make them understand that the sinking of the training ship, Niobe, was an unavoidable accident; that the cadets who went down with it might have been killed on land just as quickly; that the glory of a career in the navy is worth taking a chance for; that such an accident never may happen again.

Nevertheless, the admiralty may be right—as right as it is when it reassures sailors about the safety of the submarine or extols the glamor of existence on a war vessel. Preparation for war, whether it means firing a gun, sensational stunting in an airplane, diving in a submarine, or studying the theory of navigation in a training ship classroom as the German naval cadets were doing, is a taste of war. Human life, despite every conceivable attempt to safeguard it, necessarily is held a little cheaper when it is dedicated to protection of the nation.

A sacrifice for preparation, though less glorious than a sacrifice for winning a battle or checking the advance of the enemy, is none the less a manifestation of devotion to the principle of national security. Among the cadets may have been one who would have filled the shoes of Count von Luckner in some future conflict with the enemy. They didn't get their chance. Sixty-nine of them at the bottom of Kiel bay—immature heroes of Germany.

All-American.

Wide circulation of news of all kinds has given most people at least a working knowledge of the names and ranking of the great vessels that ply the north Atlantic ship lanes. To that meager store of knowledge is added now a new name and a new description: the Manhattan, United States line, 24,000 tons.

It is not for size or speed that the Manhattan is included. Other ships are more luxuriously fitted, have more famous cuisines and have made more spectacular records than the Manhattan will make. It is because this new ship is an all-American, the largest merchant vessel ever built in the United States and the first to be built for the crack north Atlantic passenger service in more than three decades.

Though not to be compared with the Bremen, Europa, Mauretania and Leviathan, to mention a few of the familiar names, the Manhattan is this enterprising nation's greatest shipbuilding achievement. To a fleet of German-built vessels, the United States line adds a purely American product with pardonable pride. When it is stated that the Manhattan cost $10,500,000 for material and labor obtained in this country and provided continuous employment for 20,000 men over a period of almost two years, pride is justified in more ways than one.

On the bridge of the Manhattan will be no less than the nation's favorite sea hero, Captain George Fried. If past performance is any basis, Americans will be hearing more—much more—about their own north Atlantic passenger vessel.

Economy War.

It would be enjoyable to express enthusiasm for the brand new National Economy league if common sense did not warn that the purpose implied in the name probably will disappear in thin air. The hard fact is that governmental economy, if and when it comes, must be a natural growth from roots to branches, instead of a condition of reform starting in the branches and getting back to the roots.

The league has plenty of big names and brains behind it. Its nucleus is the committee, composed largely of former soldiers, which got itself blacklisted by the American Legion a few months ago for petitioning congress to put an end to extravagant liberality in dealing with veterans of the World war. The hooting and howling which greeted that idea showed plainly that Americans have not yet grasped the first principle of wise spending in a democracy.

It is with a loud voice and angry gestures that the public demands reduction of expenses, but it is with a louder voice and angrier gestures that it demands continuation and initiation of the same expenditures which have saddled the nation with its heaviest peacetime taxation act. In this as in all abuses of government, the people are their own worst enemy. Until they can be made to see the connection between money spent on them and taxes collected from them there will be no governmental economy worth talking about.

The National Economy league's first purposes is to protect congress against the bullying tactics of lobbies; specifically, the veterans' lobby. That is one phase only of abuse. There are the agricultural lobby, the shipping lobby, the business men's lobby, the highway lobby and last, but not least, the people's lobby—that enormous pressure of misguided public opinion manifested in letters and telegrams to congressmen on virtually every subject conceivable. Can these be attacked effectually from the top? Can anything be done about them until the Confidence Game.

Reports of a Communist plot to disrupt confidence in American banks set many troubled minds to wondering, Wednesday. The possibility that bank failures may have been engineered by professional rumor spreaders can not be dismissed as preposterous. It isn't. Neither can the possibility that enemies of the capitalist system were behind the ghastly campaign be scoffed out of mind.

It is known that malicious rumors were responsible for closing many banks. It is obvious that bank failures, by destroying public confidence and causing bitterness, weaken the structure of capitalism. It is a commonly recognized fact that there are people in the United States capable of doing such a thing for the sake of their theory of a different kind of system, to be established after the overthrow of the existing system.

The rumors responsible for starting bank runs were not traced. Presumably, they were unintentionally malicious; it can not be proved that they were or weren't, however. More to the point is the confusion and hardship that resulted from the failure of so many banking institutions. There is no use denying that confidence in the system was shaken, though there is no evidence to prove that the system has been condemned in public opinion for its failure in the last few years.

Suspicion of a conspiracy to aid in bringing about bank failures is justified by common sense and the mysterious circumstances surrounding them. There is no inclination to shift blame to the unpopular Communists and their often imaginary machinations; neither is there anything to be gained by so doing. The damage has been done. Whatever the source of the rumors may have been, people believed them. It would be a grim lesson, indeed, if they could be shown that they jeopardized their own security by believing and acting on rumors instigated with malicious intent.

Two for the Price of One.

Texas still bites on the bait of two governors for the price of one. The perennial Fergusons, supposedly relegated to political oblivion when they were defeated in 1930, are back in the running again. "Ma" and "Jim," hardy plain folks, take a long time to die.

The delight of the Texas situation for political speculators lies in the wide scope of conjecture it affords. Mrs. Ferguson's success in last Saturday's primary may be another demonstration that this is a bad year for the "ins." That is a popular current theory. Then again, it may be an honest repudiation of Governor Ross Sterling and his right-hand man, former governor Dan Moody. Or it may prove that nothing is so valuable in politics as a name familiar to the people.

The last possibility has a good deal to recommend it for careful consideration. The fact probably is that the Fergusons' high trump is their long and intense political activity. They have been bold and brazen in their tactics. They have foisted government by proxy on their state, with "Ma" filling the governor's chair that shrewd "Jim" had to leave by invitation. They have indulged themselves in all the tricks known to cheap politicians. Everyone knows who they are, but fewer people care about what they have and have not done than cared when Governor Sterling was elected to keep them out, back in 1930.

For almost two decades they have cavorted in Texas politics. "Jim" was governor from 1914 to 1917, finally being ousted. He failed for the nomination in 1918, but came back strong in 1924, with "Ma" winning the election. She, in turn, was defeated in 1926, but took first place in the primary last Saturday, just as she did in 1930. Mr. Sterling defeated her in the runoff that year and is confident that he will be able to repeat this year. But "Ma" and "Jim" aren't political corpses yet—not while more than 280,000 Texans, 70,000 more than lined up for Governor Sterling, are willing to keep them alive.

A QUESTION OF PAY.

"I tell you, folks, this depression is gettin' fierce."

It's Jackie Cooper, juvenile movie star, speaking—as we hear him in our imagination.

"Here I was, drawing down my regular $2,000 a week, just as sure as Saturday came around, and then whaddaya think? They cut me a cool 35 per cent, and now I'm gonna have to scrape along on $1300 a week. Tough, I call it."

The pinch of hard times has hit Hollywood, and stars of one producing company, who have been getting from $6000 down to $1500 a week, will now draw from $3900 to $975. Jackie Cooper was in the $2,000 class, along with John Gilbert and Ramon Novarro, just under the Barrymore brothers and just above Jean Harlow and Jimmy Durante.

While these salary cuts were being made in some movie magnate's office, a similar process was going on in the White House, and Mr. Hoover's salary from now on will be $60,000 a year instead of $75,000. Jackie was formerly getting about $560 a week more than the president; now he'll get only $150 more.

Tough times, these!—Columbus Citizen.

HONORS FOR OHIO.

Selection of Atlee Pomerene as a member of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, and his probable election as chairman of that board, brings new honors to Ohio in national affairs. As a former senator from this state, special prosecutor in the Teapot Dome oil lease cases and one of the framers of the Federal Reserve system, Mr. Pomerene has enjoyed a long and distinguished career in legal and political fields.

Filling the vacancy in the chairmanship of the Finance corporation, created by the resignation of General Dawes, has been a difficult task for President Hoover. The fact that he has chosen Mr. Pomerene, a Democrat, for this important position indicates that he places the proper management of the far-reaching duties of this board ahead of any partisan phases that may attach to selection of its membership.

In Mr. Pomerene, the President has chosen wisely and the well recognized abilities of the former should serve the nation well in the present emergency. In fact, the cause for which the Reconstruction board was created is of such vital importance to the nation as a whole at this time that politics should not play any part in its administration. It is certain that Mr. Pomerene is that high-type, impartial public official, who never would allow his judgment to be influenced by partisan affiliations. Though his selection will give the Democrats four out of seven members, we believe that President Hoover has acted with wisdom.

The long and honorable record of sons of the Buckeye state in public service will not suffer at the hands of Atlee Pomerene.—Toledo Times.

Measles Hard To Detect; Easy To Catch.

During the last few months unusual numbers of cases of measles have been reported, and because of its widespread prevalence, it is important that parents be familiar with the signs or symptoms of this disease. Measles is highly contagious, and if left to itself is quickly spread from one child to another.

While no group is exempt from measles, about ninety per cent of the cases occur in children over five years of age. Second attacks are rare, but they may occur, and the disease may affect adults. Measles is serious in adults, also in children under five years. Its danger is increased, also, when it afflicts those who have physical defects or are undernourished.

Unfortunately, in its early stage measles is easily mistaken for a simple cold. The eyes are red and extremely sensitive to light, and there may be symptoms of a severe cold in the head. Fever is present, and the child may complain of sore throat, restlessness and loss of appetite.

It is not until about the fifth day that a definite diagnosis of measles can be made. At this time the characteristic rash of measles appears, first behind the ears and about the neck, then spreading rapidly over the face and body.

Most mothers have no difficulty in recognizing the disease at this stage, but already the damage has been done, in that other children have come in contact with the infected child. Consequently the disease spreads rapidly from one child to another.

The rash usually lasts about five days, and is followed by desquamation, or peeling of the skin. This stage continues for about a week. Quarantine should not be lifted until desquamation is completed and all signs of the infection have disappeared.

Mild cases of measles require little treatment besides rest in bed and isolation, but bear in mind that measles is contagious in mild as well as severe cases, and a person receiving the contagion from a mild case may develop a severe case.

Though the disease is seldom fatal, the complications menace subsequent health and even life itself. These later dangers can be avoided by keeping the patient in bed and following your doctor's orders.—Copyright, 1932, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

MEDARY IN COLUMBUS.

When Samuel Medary went from Clermont county to Columbus to enter a wider newspaper field, he joined there two of his brothers, one of whom, Jacob Medary, in 1935, had bought the Ohio Monitor from David Smith, and the name was shortly thereafter changed to the Ohio Statesman. There seems to have been a third brother not mentioned by name.

Samuel Medary and his brother, Jacob, both held the appointment as Columbus postmaster at various times. Samuel was the last territorial governor of Minnesota. Then he was transferred to the governorship of Kansas and from this got the title of governor which stuck with him afterward, leading many to believe he had been governor of Ohio.

At the height of his prosperity, he built a country place near Columbus known as "the farm house."

Nor has any 20th century whnot the glamour of the drain tpainted moss green, in the parcorner, holding a plushy spraycattails. On a wall hung with rlow ribbon, was a glass cane frothe Columbus State Fair, an on"The Stag at Bay," and a crepeof grandpa, secured with 700 coffbag signatures, a trifle out of fcus but highly reverenced. Thethe hanging lamp with lamp glapendants, tinkling merrily inwind. Also, the horse-hair sofwhere grandma sat clicking brighsteel knitting needles. The conshell with the roar of the sea; thcarpeted brick door-stop, and stionary base rocker with a oldembroidered into a German motto all as simple and direct as thsawdust and spittoon.

No modern writer, incidentallytouches the young American, Julian Green, for describing the endless drip, drip monotony of a middle class home. He skyrocketed across the literary horizon severalyears ago, writing of the pinchedlife in provincial France. Then, in a Michael Arlen right-about, weheard no more. His realism wasso startling that Edna Ferber, ina steamer chair, one lunar night of glassy stillness, dropped herbook suddenly and exclaimed: "Amouth tastes of the brass of life."

Many on Miss Ferber's ship hadtastes worse than brass beforethey skipped the deep Atlantic gutters into Havre. One morningwith the wind in curious waft, aCockney steward stood swaying inthe cabin doorway as the bargeshot upward in one of those breathtaking poises before shiveringdown. With a benignant air ofabstraction, he chirped: "A bit uppy, sir!" I'll say!—Copyright, 1932, McNaught Syndicate, Inc.

The Marry-Go-Round

BY HELEN ROWLAND.

"EX-WIFE" COUNTRY.

Once upon a time, if you had told me that easy divorce was not a good and wholesome thing I should have classed you as a moron —or as something out of Godey's Ladies' Book. I should have wanted to put you into puffed sleeves and gored skirts and a pompadour!

I believed in modernism, trial marriages and a quick and painless surgical operation the moment the marriage-ties began to sag, bind or frazzle. I believed in all this old "preserve-your-individuality-live-your-own-life-and - express-yourself" stuff.

But the older you grow, the less you know about life—and the less certain you become that you know anything.

When I glance about me, and see all these matrimonial wrecks, and read the bitter histories of these "love-me-and-leave-me" marriages, I feel myself going frowsily and stuffily and mid-Victorian. I'm just a horse-and-buggy—a Mexican hammock—a mandolin solo.

Take Russia, for instance — where divorce is as free as a pass to a food show and marriage as easy to get into and out of as a bathing suit—and where the only reason you have to give for wanting a divorce is that you are married.

• • •

According to statistics, there is at least one divorce for almost every marriage, over there, and the women are protesting bitterly at the readiness with which the men junk the old wife for a new one, every time they see a more attractive model.

Russia is getting to be the big "Ex-Wife" country. All the youngsters imbibe cynicism and modernism with their oatmeal and spinach, and are case-hardened pessimists before they are 20 and potential grass-widows and grass-widowers before they reach the altar.

Yet, when I try to count the happily married people I know over here, I find, in nine cases out of ten, that they are the permanently married; who regard marriage as a life-sentence and don't believe in divorce.

"Experimental marriage" may be all right, in theory, but the trouble is that most people rush into and out of it as though it were a subway gate. They don't give marriage a fair trial. Whereas, the "lifers" think about it a long time beforehand — and use infinitely more patience in adjusting themselves to it, and to each other, afterward.

• • •

And that's the whole secret of success and happiness in love, marriage, business or sport; choosing the right partner, playing the game fairly—and holding on.

Easy divorce will no doubt, some day, be as commonly accepted in America as votes, pyjamas and cigarets for women. But the married-lifers will always be happier than the marital experimenters — because marriage is a life job! — Copyright, 1932, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Daily Talk to Parents

BY ALICE JUDSON PEALE

CHANGING SCHOOLS.

Recently the newspapers published the picture of a child who had established a new record. She had, in the course of her education, visited no less than 28 different schools.

Probably nowhere but in our own country could such a thing occur. Nowhere else do families move from one neighborhood to another approximately once in every year.

With us it is not even unusual for a child to attend kindergartens in New York, visit the grade schools in a midwestern town and attend high schools on the Pacific coast.

This frequent moving about undoubtedly has its advantages. It is in itself something of an education to see different parts of the country, to live among various types of people and to make friends all up and down the social scale. But it is only the unusual child that is temperamentally equipped to profit by such opportunities.

A frequent change of school starts the average youngster with a greater handicap each time.

There are not only the obvious difficulties of having to cope with discrepancies and overlapping in curriculum, but the hardship of having to make each year an entirely new set of friends and of having to adjust to an utterly strange group of teachers.

It is not strange if the child who must again and again bend himself to this enormous task, is unable to do his best or to come into his own in friendships and in the extra-curicular activities which play such an important part in his social adjustment.

The arguments for and against moving into a better apartment or a new town should always include a consideration of how this change will affect the child in relation to school life.

No Surprise.

Nevertheless and notwithstanding and however much complaint

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN

"She's Gone!"

SONDRA said lightly—"I saw a picture taken of you at Biarritz in one of the papers, John."

"Is that something so out of the ordinary?" he asked with a slight smile.

"No, but you were with such a charming girl."

"I know many very charming girls."

They had come to the end of the path and were forced to stop.

"I must go back," Sondra said.

"I will walk back with you," Anderson answered.

They turned together.

"And how is everybody?" Anderson asked casually. "I seem to have been away an unconscionable time."

"Mother," Sondra said, "But then she is quite well in spite of your absence," she added with a touch of sarcasm.

He ignored that.

"Have you heard from Merriman?" he asked.

Her heart missed a beat.

"Yes, once—he seemed to be enjoying life."

It was not the truth; Mark had written that he was more unhappy than he had ever been.

"He had a note from him too," Anderson said. "I hope he will do well."

"I hope so too—for your sake," she felt his eyes upon her.

"And not for his—a little?" he asked.

"Oh, of course—but you have been so good to him, I should like him to reward you."

"You have been good to him also," Anderson said quietly.

Sondra raised startled eyes.

"What do you mean?" she stammered. "I . . . at least—I only—I only asked you to help him."

"Isn't that being good to him?"

She was unhappily silent, and suddenly Anderson stopped.

"I must leave you—I have an appointment at 12. You are not looking very well, Sondra."

She said again dispiritedly, "My head aches, I haven't been sleeping very well."

"You want a change."

"I am going to Massachusetts next month—with Beatrice."

He made a little grimace.

She frowned and looked away from him, and he said again—

"Well, I must be going—"

He raised his hat and had turned away when she spoke his name impulsively. "John—"

He came back.

"Yes, Sondra—"

She stood silent, her eyes distressed, her cheeks flushed.

"Are you angry with me about anything?" she stammered.

"Angry?" he smiled as if she had been a child. "Have you done anything that I ought to be angry with you about?" he asked whimsically.

"Of course not," but her eyes fell.

"Then I am not angry." Anderson said. He waited a moment, and this time it was Sondra who turned away.

She walked along with unseeing eyes; there was a curious mixture of anger and unhappiness in her heart.

She almost felt as if she had forced herself upon him and had been curtly dismissed, and yet—he had been perfectly courteous and friendly, and again she wondered if perhaps the fault lay with herself?

Was it because she felt guilty? and yet—what was it to do with Anderson if she chose to marry and keep it a secret? She was in no way tied to him. He had gone away after she had asked him to stay; it was for her to be angry. Not that she cared what he did, or if he never spoke to her again; and then swiftly on the heels of that thought came denial.

"That's not true—I do care. I'm . . . fond of him."

Fond of him, and used to him also—she had unconsciously grown to rely on him; he had always been there, her willing cavalier—she would miss him terribly if the old happy friendship was indeed at an end. And he had been in too much of a "hurry" to ring her up—her cheeks burned as she recalled his words.

The order of things was indeed reversed—it had always been she who had put him aside for other inclinations, but now . . .

Of course he was lunching with Nathalie Symons; Sondra felt hurt and humiliated.

She would have liked to lunch with John—she had missed him terribly during the past month, but it was only now that he was home again and not seeking her company, that she realized how much she had missed him.

Had Beatrice been right when she said that John had not believed them that day? Beatrice was always full of stupid ideas—

Sondra was quite sure that John had not suspected anything; why should he? and yet . . . it was from that moment that the easy feeling of friendship between them seemed to have altered.

But she could make no more overtures to him—she would have to stand aside now, and let him take the initiative.

She went home restlessly; her meeting with Anderson had quite put Flora and last night's scene from her thoughts until the butler asked her to go to Mr. Lomax at once in the study.

It was so seldom that Ben ever noticed his sister-in-law that Sondra felt a sudden throb of anxiety as she went to his study door; surely Flora had not carried out her foolish threat?

Ben was sitting in his chair at the elaborate desk, staring at his wife's portrait, and he did not move when Sondra entered.

She went quickly to him—

"Ben . . . is anything the matter?"

He turned his eyes to her face, curiously blank eyes they were, as if some shock had wiped out their intelligence.

Sondra laid a hand on his arm, shaking him.

"Ben! . . . what is it? What has happened?"

His face worked convulsively, he made an effort to speak. "She's gone . . . left me . . . I didn't think she meant it — no woman could be so cruel . . . She said she hated me—how could she hate me, I've never been anything but good to her . . . Gone without a word . . . never coming back . . . Oh, my God, what's to become of me?"

Sondra stood helplessly silent, her hand on his shoulder.

She had never liked this man, but it was impossible not to feel sorrow for him; after all he had loved Flora—love was so cruel, as Flora had said last night—"It's not happiness, it's just suffering all the time" . . .

Lomax went on — utterly unmanned.

"I'd have given her the moon if she'd asked for it—and she said she hated me . . . oh, my God, what's to become of me?"

Sondra bit her lip to hide its sudden trembling.

"She'll come back—" she said hoarsely. "Don't be so upset—I'm sure she'll come back—but she knew that Flora would never come back, and Lomax's broken words found a terrified echo in her own heart—"What's to become of me?"

It has been truly said that the big events of life generally happen with unexpected suddenness, and certainly during the next two days so many things happened to Sondra that she was left bewildered and uncertain which way to turn.

Lomax recovered his poise with surprising rapidity, and on the morning following his wife's departure he sent for Sondra.

She had never known him very well; he had always rather ignored her, and now with only a curt good morning he began to tell her as briefly as possible of his plans for the future.

"I am shutting up the house, and I sail at the end of the week for Europe. I presume you have friends you can go to; you can't stay here anyway. I don't know how you are placed about money—" (he did know, perfectly well) "but if you are anything like your sister, I suppose you are hard-up." He pushed a check across the table. "This is for $2,500. Please sign the acknowledgment."

Sondra stared at him, her face flushing.

She knew that this was his way of repudiating all further responsibility of her; she had always guessed that he would do something of the kind if ever Flora left him, but this curt dismissal seemed like an insult.

The poor relation—paid off, no longer required—good-bye and good riddance.

"Heart of a Wife"

BY ADELE GARRISON

Madge Confides in Lillian the Story of Dicky's Leaving Her in Anger.

MY wait for Dicky's reply to my comment upon his ultimatum to me was of only a second's duration. With something very like the snarl of an enraged animal, he flung himself violently away from me, almost upsetting me in the process, and rushed for the door.

"Do anything you blankety-blank please," he hurled back over his shoulder, and ignoring the hour and the probability that he was awakening every guest of the country hotel, he slammed the door after him.

Dicky Stages a Scene

It was this gesture, even more than his words, that made me realize how thoroughly angry he was. Many years of life with him have taught me that, while he can work himself into a very convincing simulation of rage with me, it is a rare occasion indeed that he risks a scene in which strangers may have the chance to comment upon our differences.

I found myself also beyond all consideration for others, all thought, indeed, of anything save one obsessing thought. Dicky was rushing away to an air flight in a rage with me. He was in no condition mentally to do anything requiring a calm mind and equitable emotions. I was racked with horrible forebodings as I tore open the door and dashed down the corridor.

Food for Gossip

"Dicky! Dicky!" I called, but found my throat so dry that the words could not have been audible more than a few feet from me. The street door of the hotel slammed while I was only half way to the stairs, and I knew enough of my husband's swiftness of motion to be certain that any attempt of mine to catch up with him would be futile.

The sound of a stealthily opening door just behind me made me realize that I was only making food for gossip, and I turned back to my room. I was met on the threshold by Lillian, who had evidently been awakened by the slamming door.

"Madge! What is it? What has happened? Why didn't you call me?"

I sat up in bed, dabbed at my eyes and spoke chokingly.

"Nothing. I've just been making a fool of myself, that's all. How is Helena?"

"Not so good. She's quiet just now, and Ronald is sitting with her. But you can't put me off this way. You don't go to pieces this way without reason. Look here!"—her voice thickened, the grip on my shoulder tightened — "have you heard something you don't dare tell me?"

"He'll Never Come Back!"

The look in her eyes brought me upright in swift, impassioned denial.

"No! No! No! I have heard nothing new."

"I don't believe you," she said, and her voice as well as her hands were shaking. "Nothing else would make you give way in this fashion. [illegible] to be first compact we all had made—to avoid everything that could attract attention to our party. Without turning my head, I spoke in the exasperated tone of a wife whose husband has disregarded some conjugal rule.

"If that isn't just like a man!" I apostrophized, with disgust in my tone, "slamming out like a sulky school boy just because he's asked to put on a heavier coat! Well! I can't help it if he does take his death! I've done my duty."

The door behind me closed as stealthily as it had opened, and as I turned and went back to my room, I hoped that I had enacted creditably the role of a smugly efficient wife.

But once safe within my own bedroom, I could restrain my sobs no longer, and gave myself up to a burst of terrified weeping. With my face almost buried in my pillow I heard nothing, saw nothing, until a gentle but firm hand was laid upon my shoulder, and Lillian's anxious voice made me realize the selfishness of my grief.

"Madge! What is it? What has happened? Why didn't you call me?"

I sat up in bed, dabbed at my eyes and spoke chokingly.

"Nothing. I've just been making a fool of myself, that's all. How is Helena?"

"Not so good. She's quiet just now, and Ronald is sitting with her. But you can't put me off this way. You don't go to pieces this way without reason. Look here!"—her voice thickened, the grip on my shoulder tightened — "have you heard something you don't dare tell me?"

"He'll Never Come Back!"

The look in her eyes brought me upright in swift, impassioned denial.

"No! No! No! I have heard nothing new."

"I don't believe you," she said, and her voice as well as her hands were shaking. "Nothing else would make you give way in this fashion. [illegible] to be her the truth. Nothing else would serve. I flung that truth out at her explosively, partly with jealousy, partly in confession, to make it convincing, partly in release of my terrible fear.

"Dicky has gone on that flight so terribly angry at me that he is shaking. I am so afraid that he'll never come back."

She looked at me in wide-eyed astonishment.

"Either you're crazy, or I am," she said. "Dicky is in our sitting room this second, talking to Harry."

The Stars Say—

For Saturday, July 30

AN extremely lively, enterprising and pleasant day is predicted from the long chain of lunar transits. There may be felt a fine urge to energy and initiative, with a high-pressure stimulus to achieve advanced ambitions, both personal and in business associations. Employment may bring advancement, there may be great impetus in all dealings with rings, mergers, secret agreements and new contracts. It is propitious for forging ahead, but not too ardently or with violence. The same advice applies in domestic, social and romantic ties.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a very lively, enterprising and high pitched year, with a determined effort to reach out for high goals. Employment is favorable, new business arrangements, and negotiations with mergers, close corporations, secret societies and diplomatic relations. But a measure of restraint and deliberation is enjoined. A child born on this day may be aggressive, impetuous, and have fine initiative.

Notable nativity: Henry Ford, automobiles.

A buoy large enough to contain a man has been developed by a Spanish navy officer to enable crews to escape from sunken submarines.

FAST SPENDERS IN PHILLY

PHILADELPHIA — Philadelphia women spend an average of $1,000 a year on retail purchases, George W. Elliot, general secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, says the figures at a recent meeting here. Three-quarters of a million women in this city bought more than $750,000,000 worth of retail goods last year.

Tests by New York scientists have demonstrated that great singing voices are due in their owners' mental and emotional perception and not solely to their bodily abilities.

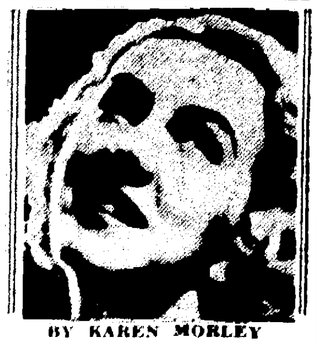
My Beauty Hint



BY KAREN MORLEY

THE housewife who scoffs at exercises, claiming she gets enough of it in her household duties, should give some sport a trial before she voices her opinion.

While she may get a lot of exercise in carrying out her home duties the results aren't the same as in sport.

An instance is the game of bowling. The keenness of the sport spurs one on, with beneficial results. Body limberness means grace, which is a major element of beauty.

MEMORY RESULTS IN COMPENSATION

By International News Service

CHICAGO—Because a buck private remembered the name of a second lieutenant who reprimanded him in France, the former doughboy today is receiving government compensation.

Not that John Harper was angered by the lieutenant's rebuke. For a wonder, Harper acknowledged that he "had it coming." The offense was lighting a cigarette while riding on a truck near the front lines at night. Harper realized that the Germans might have seen the match glare and killed them all.

Anyhow the name of the officer, Lieut. Frank Barth, stuck in his mind.

Later Harper was wounded. When he applied for compensation he couldn't remember the names of his company officers, but he did recall Lieut. Barth. Not knowing Barth's company, Harper searched 13 years to find him.

By chance Harper met the former lieutenant last fall on the Pacific coast. Today he has his compensation.

PAAVO NURMI BARRED FROM OLYMPIC GAMES

FINN DENIED RIGHT TO AID COUNTRY BY OFFICIALS OF A. A. F.

No Chance for Appeal Left in Decision; Finland To Carry on.

By The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES, July 29—Like hamlet without the celebrated Dane in the cast, the Olympic games will launch their most spectacular athletic show this weekend without Paavo Nurmi.

Swiftly and without the remotest loophole for repeal, the great Finnish athlete stood barred today from all Olympic competition by a cut decision rejecting his entry, based upon charges that he professionalized himself by accepting money beyond his expense requirements for a 1931 barnstorming trip through Germany.

Paavo Nurmi

As a result, the Olympics suddenly have been bereft of their greatest track and field drawing card.

No sooner had the ban on Nurmi been formally announced than reports spread that (1) Finland would consider withdrawing its entire team from the games; and (2) that Nurmi would immediately turn professional for a series of match races.

Finnish leaders left the final hearing on the Nurmi case in shaken spirits, convinced their greatest athletic figure had been unjustly convicted. They told the Associated Press, nevertheless, that they expected to go through with the games, with their athletes redoubling efforts to make up for the loss of Nurmi.

Nurmi refused to comment, either on the decision or the possibility of listening to professional offers that already have begun to reach him.

Under the decision rejecting Nurmi's entry, there was no recourse today for either the runner or Finland in the full congress of the international A. A. F., beyond the possibility of vocal aftermath. Any reconsideration of the matter was blocked completely.

FOUR TILTS BILLED IN DIAMOND LEAGUE

Four games are slated Sunday in the Tri-county baseball league. Agosta will play Haughn's Barbers of Marion at the silk mill diamond, Owens Billiards of Marion at Morral, Radnor at Essex and Thompson A. C. at Marseilles. Morral is now leading the league with a record of 11 won and one lost.

The league standings:

Morral	11	1	917
Radnor	7	3	700
Agosta	8	4	667
Haughn's Barbers	7	6	583
Marseilles	5	7	417
Essex	4	9	305
Thompson A. C.	3	9	250
Owens' Billiards	3	9	250

FAST QUARTER MILER

The foreign contestants at the Olympic games will have to run a great race to beat Bill Carr (above) of the University of Pennsylvania in the 400 meter run. Carr won his place on Uncle Sam's team when he defeated Ben Eastman and set a new world record of 46.0 in the final trials.

MILLERS AGAIN WIN FROM BREWERS, 9-5

Indianapolis Keeps Pace by Downing Toledo; Columbus Loses.

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, July 29—Rosy Ryan, after weathering a storm that threatened to prolong the Minneapolis Millers' losing streak Wednesday, came back yesterday and held Milwaukee to two hits in five innings to gain credit for his thirteenth victory of the season.

Minneapolis needed another of those big finishes to overcome the Brewers. In the last of the seventh Mowry and Art Ruble socked home runs which along with some other hitting netted four runs and a 9 to 5 decision.

Indianapolis kept pace with the Millers by going 10 innings to defeat Toledo, 2 to 1, in a night game.

Columbus was able to hit Bub Jonnard often but couldn't do much with men on the bases and took a 6 to 2 beating from Louisville in the other night game.

TONY PIET SLAMS 2 HOMERS AS PIRATES DOWN GIANTS TWICE

Rookie Second Sacker Also Handles 19 Chances Without Error.

By The Associated Press

The Texas league, proving ground for the hero of the last world series, Pepper Martin, may also have spawned the shining light of the next.

Tony Piet, the 25-year-old second baseman of the Pittsburgh Pirates who walloped six hits, including a pair of home runs, drove in nine runs and scored four times himself to help trounce the Giants twice yesterday, 10 to 7 and 9 to 1, has all the earmarks.

Piet, like Martin, joined the Pirates at the start of the season without benefit of ballyhoo.

Piet played with a semi-pro outfit around Chicago before he signed with Corsicana, Texas, in 1928. The Pirates brought him up last season, and in 44 games he hit .290.

In addition to his great hitting exhibition against the Giants yesterday, Piet handled 19 chances without an error.

The Chicago Cubs turned back the Boston Braves, 4 to 1. Lon Warneke turned in his ninth straight win and his 16th of the year.

The Cincinnati Reds halted the Phillies again, 7 to 4, when George Grantham smote a home run in the ninth with two mates on base.

Brooklyn made it four out of five over the St. Louis Cardinals by splitting a doubleheader. The Dodgers took the first, 9 to 6, and dropped the nightcap, 8 to 6.

With Babe Ruth returning to the line-up to bang his 27th and 28th home runs and drive in seven runs, the Yankees took a 10 to 1 fall out of the Cleveland Indians in the American league feature.

The Boston Red Sox scored their third triumph over Chicago, 2 to 1, and the St. Louis Browns took a 6 to 4 win over Washington.

Detroit trimmed the Athletics, 4 to 2.

PITCHER SIGNED BY CHICAGO AMERICANS

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, July 29—Manager Lew Fonseca of the White Sox today planned another investigation of the ivory situation in class AA territory, with the American Association as his field.

Fonseca didn't say just what the Sox needed most. He said he would visit Louisville and Toledo and possibly Minneapolis and St. Paul.

The club last night signed Phil Gallivan, a right-handed pitcher, who did a short hitch with Brooklyn early in the season, until the Eastern league disbanded, he had been with the Brooklyn farm at Hartford, Conn.

LEONARD ADDS ONE TO VICTORY LIST

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, July 29—Thirty-seven-year-old Benny Leonard has gone a long way toward disproving the adage that they never come back.

The former lightweight champion today had won the 20th straight victory of his comeback campaign, the result of a clean cut 10-round decision over Billy Townsend of Vancouver last night.

Leonard, weighing 151 pounds, was credited with eight rounds to two for his 144 pound opponent.

GASCO HOLDS LEAD BY BEATING EAGLES

Pace Setters Win, 6-5; Shovel Tops Excavator; Huber Downs Erie; Augenstein Cops.

BY BOB KIRKPATRICK
Sports Editor, The Star

A three-run rally in the final inning yesterday jerked victory from the fire for the Gasco club in the Industrial league and kept the utility company combine on top of the standings in the Thursday softball circuit. The Eagles lodge was the victim of the seventh-inning uprising on the part of the Gassers, losing out by a 6-5 count. The Steam Shovel nine retained its hold on second place by beating the Excavator-Alloy, 5-1. The Augenstein A. C. eliminated the C. D. & M. tittler contenders by handing the Electricians a 9-5 setback. The Erie Mechanics sank deeper into the depths of the cellar by dropping a 4-1 decision to the Huber.

HOW THEY STAND

Industrial League

Club	W.	L.	Pct.
Gasco club	9	2	.818
Steam Shovel	8	3	.727
Eagles	6	4	.600
C. D. & M.	6	5	.545
Augenstein A. C.	5	5	.500
Huber company	4	6	.400
Excavator-Alloy	3	8	.273
Erie Mechanics	1	9	.100

The Eagles threw quite a scare into the Gasco before losing out in the final frame. Two singles and a home run by Don McAninch netted three runs in the first frame for the Eagles and it wasn't until the fifth inning that the eventual winners finally knotted the count. The Eagles went out and got two more in the seventh and went into the final half of the inning ahead by two runs. A walk and three successive hits sent three Gasco runs across the plate and spelled defeat for the fraternal nine. Willie Baldauf drove out the hit that scored the winning tally.

Gilmore Pitches Well

Henry Gilmore held the Shovel batters in almost complete subjection for five innings but weakened in the sixth and allowed five markers to find their way across the platter. Those five were enough to give the Diggers a 5-1 advantage over the Excavator nine. The losers collected their one run in the fifth inning.

The C. D. & M. combine, riddled recently through company transfers of employes, proved no match for the Augenstein A. C. team and dropped a 9-5 decision. The defeat dropped the Electricians to fourth place and shoved them out of the title race. Staley and Kochensperger did the flinging for the losers and were nicked for a total of only eight hits. G. Steinman limited the Electricians to seven tallies. Five of the C. D. & M. scores crossed the plate in the fourth. Considering the fact the team is greatly crippled through loss of players the Electricians made a gallant stand against the hard hitting Augenstein nine.

Huber on Top

The Huber company, with nowhere in particular to go in the pennant race, jumped on Freddie Vestal for seven hits and turned them into four tallies to beat the Erie Mechanics for the ninth time in 10 games by a 4-1 margin. While Vestal was being touched for seven hits Kellogg was holding the railroaders in check by giving them only five safeties.

Batteries and score by innings:

Erie	000	000	0					1	5

BOZINIS, FISHER TO HEADLINE MAT CARD HERE MONDAY NIGHT

Sensation Lightheavies Billed for Two-Hour Bout in Open Air Ring.

Midget Fisher, the sensational Butternut, Wis., light heavyweight who so impressed Marion wrestling fans with the brilliant display of holds here a few weeks ago will again swing into action here next Monday night when he meets Nick Bozinis, the tough Greek light heavyweight, in the two out of three falls main bout of the weekly mat show at Shovel outdoor arena on Lincoln avenue.

Fisher showed local wrestling fans some of the most sensational matwork they have seen in a long time at any weight and looked fully as good as any wrestler who has ever appeared in a local ring.

In meeting Bozinis, Fisher will be taking on a man who has been a definite threat to champions for the last 10 years, and who at the present time is going better than ever before. Bozinis has just returned to the middlewest after having had eight weeks of training under the well-known Farmer Burns at Omaha, Neb., and is now at the peak of his career.

He'll be a match for Fisher, there's no doubt about that and if the doughty Greek should get the breaks Fisher will likely go down in the first defeat since he has invaded this section.

With this 10-strike bout heading the parade, Monday's card looks as good as any presented in Marion in some time.

The semi-final Monday night will see Larry Straub, the speedy young Columbus grappler mixing holds with Ernie Nolan, the rough and tough welterweight from Miami, Fla. They will meet in a 45-minute time limit battle with two falls to win.

Straub is well known here, having wrestled here on numerous occasions. Nolan is still somewhat of a stranger but it is almost certain that before Monday night is over he will be quite prominent. He and Straub should put on a slip and tuck battle.

The one one-fall 30 minute opener will send Cleve Welch of New York against Jack Thompson, crack El Paso, Texas, light heavyweight.

STATE CONSIDERS AKRON PARK PLAN

Gov. White Receives Proposal To Take Over Big Development Project.

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., July 29 — Akron's proposed water supply and park development project in the Cuyahoga river basin in Geauga county would be taken over by the state under plans before Governor George White today.

The governor took the proposal under advisement after a conference with Mayor C. Nelson Sparks and other Akron officials yesterday.

Mayor Sparks told the chief executive that the project would provide employment for thousands of men in the industrial district extending from Cleveland to Akron and Youngstown. He promised that $1,000,000 already invested in the development would be turned over to the state if the plan is approved.

The basin then would be made into a state park with Akron retaining perpetual water rights. Alone, Sparks said, the city would take 10 or 15 years to complete the project, thus preventing unemployment relief at this time.

Governor White said the state's decision would be deferred until the United States attorney general rules on the legality of financing the work through the federal Reconstruction Finance Corporation. Then state department heads will determine the feasibility and usefulness of the project.

OLD WHIPPING TREE MAY BE REMOVED

By United Press

ALFRED, Me.—One of the few whipping trees still standing in America, located at the corner of the Randall estate, is, figuratively speaking, on its "last legs."

Recently a deep crack appeared at the base of a huge branch overhanging the highway. Townsfolk fear that the tree, which dates back to 1800 at least, which probably earlier, may have to be removed soon.

A bronze marker recounts that the tree was the village whipping post from 1800 to 1830. One person punished at the sturdy white oak was Joan Andrews, wife of John Andrews, of Piscataquay. She received "stripes on the bare skin" as an "infamous scold and a breaker of the peace."

Now . . . IVORY SOAP Prices are Lowest in 17 Years

Yes—it has been a national sensation—and Ivory Soap sales are beating all records.

Your neighbors have read the news in their daily papers. They have seen the new prices on grocery-store displays. They are buying Ivory by the dozen cakes.

Day after day, the unending stream of gleaming white Ivory cakes is flowing into millions of American homes from coast to coast. Homes that used to use three or four cakes a month are now using six or eight or a dozen.

"Why?" we've asked grocers.

"Because my customers find Ivory so economical at these new prices that they can use it for all soap purposes."

"Yes," say the women themselves, "that's right. We used to use Ivory only for toilet purposes and fine laundry. But now we can save our hands and all our family clothes and our nice painted surfaces by using Ivory wherever we need soap at all."

Now you can make Ivory your only soap, too. It's the same pure, mild Ivory you've always known—but today it costs almost as little as ordinary laundry soaps.

Tour of Eastern Ohio Outlined for Sunday

A Sunday tour through eastern Ohio has been routed for next week-end by Mrs. Della V. Gallagher, secretary of the Marion Auto club, for the scenic beauty and points of interest along the way.

The drive can be made easily in a day, and there are a number of spots along the route suitable for a picnic lunch. Several sizeable cities also make a selection of restaurants and hotel dining rooms available for those who prefer to purchase their lunch.

The route lies over route 30-S to Mansfield, and route 30 eastward through Hayesville, Jeromesville, Wooster and Massillon to Canton. Those who previously have not visited the McKinley memorial at Canton will wish to do so. The monument cost $525,000 and is located in Westlawn cemetery in that city.

Historic Spots

Leave Canton for the south on route 8 to Sandyville and New Philadelphia, the county seat of Tuscarawas county, rich in historic lore. On the way from Canton to New Philadelphia, stop at Zoarville, a small village, and turn westward a few miles to Zoar, located on a side road. Here are located King's mansion, and a number of quaint houses. Retrace the road to Zoarville and continue to New Philadelphia by way of Dover, remaining on route 8.

Leave New Philadelphia on route 8 to the intersection of route 36 and turn westward on the latter route. There is a short detour on this strip of road, but a good paved route is provided. At Gnadenhutten, pause long enough to absorb some of the historic atmosphere of the village.

The first white child born in Ohio was John Lewis Roth, born at Gnadenhutten on July 4, 1773. The first temperance and the first peace societies west of the Alleghanies were formed in the village, and the first school book for use in Ohio was written there. Gnadenhutten monument is located on the site of the massacre of 96 Christian Indians by white militiamen in 1782.

Labor Leader's Home

Continue to the west on route 36 to Coshocton, county seat of Coshocton county, the native county of William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor. At Coshocton is located Bouquet monument, where Colonel Henry Bouquet, with 1,500 men, on Oct. 25, 1765, delivered this ultimatum to Indian chiefs. "I give you 12 days to deliver all the prisoners in your possession." The Indians complied. There are a number of interesting sights near Coshocton, but none are located on main routes. Inquiry in the city will provide directions for those wishing to spend more time around this county.

Leave Coshocton to the north on route 78 to Millersburg, seat of Holmes county and the center of extensive strip mining. Where the coal lies near the surface of the land, the land is "stripped" away by shovels and the coal is taken up.

Proceed to the northeast from Millersburg to Loudonville on route 39, and from Loudonville follow route 97 through Butler, Bellville to Lexington. A part of this route lies over semi-improved roads, including a short section of gravel. At Lexington, turn to the west on route 42 and follow that route through Johnsville to Mt. Gilead. At Mt. Gilead strike route 95 for Marion.

In experiments with a view to giving Siam wireless telephone connection with all the principal countries of the world conversations have been carried on between Bankok and Washington, D. C.

SCOUTS' GOOD TURN IN TEXAS UNUSUAL

Troops Stock Hatchery with Fish To Kill Hordes of Mosquitoes.

By International News Service

TYLER, Tex.—When Boy Scouts of Tyler looked around to find their "good turn," they picked a job that is expected to bring a great deal of benefit to this city.

Under the direction of Jimmie Lavender, scoutmaster, the public service committee of the Boy Scouts has stocked a gambusia (commonly known as the "top-minnow") hatchery in co-operation with the state department of health for the control of the malaria carrying anopheles mosquito.

The hatchery, located in the rear lawn of the city hall, is stocked with gambusia from nearby streams, and at certain times each week the surplus gambusia are distributed to citizens of the city who place them in lawn fountains, rock garden pools and lily pools.

The gambusia are the natural enemies of mosquito larva, and the city health office has announced that all private pools not stocked with gambusia will be oiled by the city.

Automobiles of American manufacture or type accounted for 87.6 per cent of the total registrations in the world at the beginning of this year.

Sun's Eclipse Aug. 31 To Provide Scientific Show for Entire U. S.

Every Locality Promised View of Moon's Crossing.

BY ROBERT H. BAKER
Professor of Astronomy, University of Illinois.

By The Associated Press

URBANA, Ill., July 29—The eclipse of the sun on Aug. 31 will be visible throughout the United States, Canada and Mexico. From all parts of North America the dark disk of the moon can be seen on this day crossing in front of the sun.

But the total eclipse can be viewed only along a strip a hundred miles in width, the track of the moon's shadow over the earth's surface.

100 Seconds To Pass

This track begins near the North pole, where the shadow strikes the earth at sunrise. It runs southeastward across Hudson Bay, Quebec, New England, and then out into the ocean, where the shadow leaves the earth at sunset.

After traversing the northeast corner of Vermont the center of the shadow will move swiftly past Lancaster and Conway, N. H., and will reach the coast about halfway between Portsmouth and Portland.

The shadow will arrive in this region about 3:30 p. m., Eastern Standard Time, and will require only a minute and forty seconds to pass over any point on the central line.

Will See Corona

Crowds of people will assemble along the track of the shadow on the afternoon of Aug. 31 to watch the rare spectacle of a total solar eclipse. Totality will last only 100 seconds at any place, but if the sky is clear it will be a sight well worth going a long way to see.

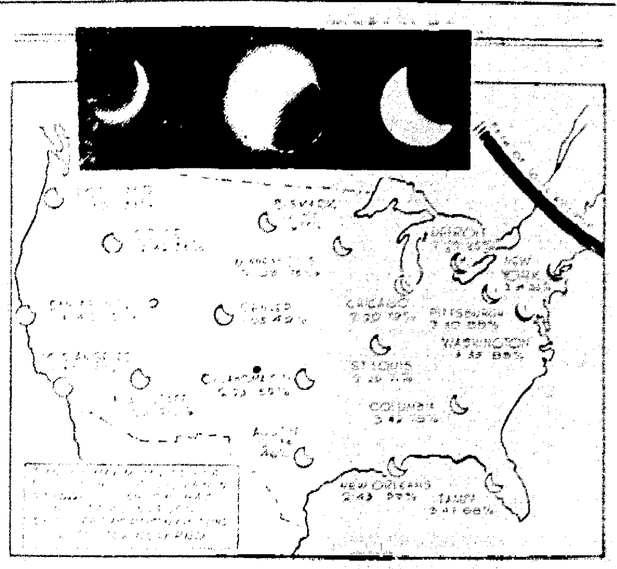
During this short interval the moon will hide the sun completely. Day will be turned into night. Stars will come out. The mysterious corona and probably some of the flame-colored prominences surrounding the sun will burst into view.

Preceding this principal feature of the exhibit the partial eclipse can be seen, beginning in New England about 2:20 p. m., Eastern Standard Time, and after totality the moon will not withdraw entirely from before the sun's disk until 4:30 p.m.

At the edges of the shadow track, 50 miles from the central line, the total eclipse will last only a moment. The southern edge across New England is a line from the top of Lake Champlain to Salem, Mass. Parallel to it, the northern edge passes through Boothbay, Maine.

Farther north or south the eclipse will be only partial. The moon will pass across the sun, but not centrally across, so that it will not entirely hide the sun. And the fraction of the sun's disk that is eclipsed will be less as the distance from the central line is greater. At Boston 99 per cent will be hidden, at Denver 49 per cent, at Los Angeles 13 per cent.

In watching the partial eclipse the eyes should be protected by a dark glass. For even when only a small crescent of the sun's disk remains uncovered, the light may be too strong to gaze at safely for any length of time.



The map shows the proportionate amount of the solar eclipse of Aug. 31 to be seen at different American cities. Above are shown different phases of the eclipse of 1930, as seen from Lick observatory in California.

Why Boil Away COSTLY FRUIT JUICE?

ASKS THIS CHAMPION JELLY MAKER

. . . Why not turn every last bit into delicious tasting jam . . . and thus save 2½c per glass?

BY Mrs. J. O. Schon
NEBRASKA STATE JELLY CHAMPION

"This year's fruit is the finest and cheapest we have had in years. And I know that hundreds of women reading this newspaper are going to take advantage of this fact and put up jams and jellies for the long winter months ahead.

"And I hope they will all use Certo! For Certo will save them, just as it saves me, a really considerable amount of money.

"With Certo, you see, only 1 minute's hard boiling time is necessary to make jelly from any fruit . . . and for most fruits even less.

"And thus hardly a single bit of juice has time to boil away in wasteful steam . . . with the result that you get one-half again more glasses from the same amount of fruit. Last year this saved me from 2 to 5¢ on every glass of jam or jelly that I made.

"And, of course, this Certo one-minute boil saves considerable time too. Indeed, I find it an easy matter to make a full batch of jelly in 12 minutes from the time I put my fruit juice and sugar on to cook."

Mrs. Schon's Certo-made jellies and jams have been awarded an almost endless succession of State Fair prizes during the past few seasons, for flavor, texture and color. In the last three years she has won 15 prizes at the Nebraska State Fair. And she is only one of the 5,000,000 jelly makers who are using this magical product.

Why don't you do as Mrs. Schon suggests and order a supply of Certo today with your fruit and other jelly making supplies? Simply follow carefully the Certo recipes that come in the booklet attached to every Certo bottle . . . and you can't go wrong. Don't delay. Get your bottle of Certo from your grocer today. It is a product of General Foods Corporation.
